

The Making of a National Tournament Success

By Ed Guitierrez
Tournament Director
US Triple Crown of Youth Wrestling

While working beside my father and five brothers in the farmlands of northern Colorado it was impossible to envision that I would one day have the privilege of producing the United States Triple Crown of Youth Wrestling (U.S. Triple Crown), one of the largest amateur wrestling tournament series in the nation. Every year the series includes a tournament in November, December and the championship in late March. Wrestlers who persevere and place first at all three tournaments are awarded a highly prestigious Triple Crown trophy.

When asked to write about why the U.S. Triple Crown has become so successful and why this series is positioned to attract over 6,000 competitors this season, I looked back over the last three years and noticed our goal has remained consistent. Rocky Mountain Nationals, Inc. (RMN) is committed to producing youth wrestling events that ensure young competitors. Their coaches and their parents are a part of a competition experience that instills a
