

FROM PINS TO PEN . . . AS I SEE IT!

By Wade Schalles

If one listens, and not even closely, it's rather easy to find things to write about in our sport. The upside of selecting one of these much-conversed topics is everyone has interest in reading what you write. The downside is everyone has an opinion with which to critique your effort.

So for the excitement of redundancy let's revisit, then attempt to rework the coin toss and the 30-second sudden victory rule.

To start, there are only two classifications of people who like this rule as it currently reads. They are the ones who won the coin toss in the last match they wrestled and their relatives. No one else espouses the greatness of this statute, at least in the circles I travel.

Watch for yourselves in any match. Calculate the percentage of individuals who win the coin toss and then the match.
